

R-ADHIKARYA “NICHE” AWARD (RANA) PROSPECTUS (ver. 10 – Feb’26)

I. Purpose:

The R-Adhikarya “Niche” Award is a token of appreciation and recognition for smart, innovative and competitive young people who wish to further pursue their dreams to learn, explore and apply disruptive ideas, and “niche” innovative thinking, in their studies and future careers.

The Award will help encourage, motivate, and increase the confidence of promising students to explore unique and unusual – as opposed to “more-of-the-same” competencies and solutions in their future careers. It is to reward those who dare to think differently, and are interested in studying and solving important contemporary problems and/or future societal needs/wants not currently being considered or significantly addressed by others. It supports young visionaries to develop a “Growth Mindset”.

II. The Awards:

The competitive Award will be offered annually to students at three (3) world-class US educational institutions, the East-West Center (EWC), Stanford University, and Cornell University.

(1) The East-West Center (EWC), Honolulu, Hawaii, USA

One (1) Award (initially) is offered annually for graduate study, either as:

Award-1a + EWC Graduate Degree Fellowship: Total Value: $ 103,000 as follows:

- The Award will provide $ 10,000 in cash, and EWC will provide housing, books, insurance, & stipends (valued at $ 26,000 total for two years), plus Tuition Fees at University of Hawai’i (UH) for 2 years (valued at $ 67,000), or

Award-1b + EWC Foundation Scholarship: Total Value: $ 56,000 as follows:

- The Award and EWC will provide $ 10,000 each in cash, plus a reduction in Tuition Fees at University of Hawaii (UH) for 2 years (valued at $ 36,000).

(2) Stanford University, Stanford, California, USA

One (1) Award (initially) will be offered annually for undergraduate study:

- Eligible Undergraduate Students who are accepted to and enroll at Stanford University will be automatically considered to receive $12,500 cash from the Ronny Adhikarya Undergraduate Scholarship, plus a financial aid package (valued around $ 60,000 or more) from Stanford Univ.

(3) Cornell University, Ithaca, New York, USA

One (1) Award annually for graduate study of $ 10,000 cash minimum, plus Financial Aid Awards (est. valued at $ 70,000 or more) from Cornell’s Dept. of Global Development for MPS or Ph.D. Students.

In addition, RANA PRIZE is offered to two (2) participants annually (for Free Tuition of $ 1,000 each) to the COMBI Institute’s Communication for Behavioral Impact (Combi) Professional Development program (an 8-day Learning Event) in Indonesia, in collaboration with the City Univ. of New York (CUNY).

III. Awards Donor:

Dr. Ronny Adhikarya, and his wife, Mee-Ching, decided to set-up funding for these Annual Awards from their estate. Ronny Adhikarya, born in Bogor, Indonesia, was a student activist and a journalist in Indonesia until he went to the US for his studies: Cornell for his masters (1971-72) and Stanford for his Ph.D. (1977-80). He was fortunate to obtain full-fellowships (including stipends for living costs) from the two universities. He worked as a research staff at the East-West Center (EWC) starting in 1972, where he met pioneers and international luminaries in his field of expertise (education & communication) who mentored and provided him with invaluable “tacit” knowledge and intellectual capital to continue his international development assistance career in many countries, mainly with the United Nations/FAO and the World Bank, and other institutions for more than 45 years. It’s now “Pay-Back”/“Give-Back” time!

IV. Eligibility:

The following are the eligibility and requirements for applying and competing for the Awards:
